Scam banking calls

Beware of phone calls claiming to be from your bank – this could be a scammer trying to gain access to your account.

They may make a genuine bank phone number appear on your caller display, and they may block your line so that you speak to them again when you think you have phoned your bank.

Never give out sensitive personal or financial information to someone who phones you, no matter who they claim to be or how convincing they seem.

Instead, end the call and check that your phone line is clear by calling a friend or relative.

You can then contact your bank using a number you trust, such as one from your bank card or statement or from the bank's website.
